AI Overview

Fiber optic distribution boxes in Botswana are available through local distributors like BroadTech and online suppliers, serving as essential enclosures for splicing, termination, and distribution of optical fibers in FTTH and PON networks.

Overview of Fiber Optic Distribution Boxes

A fiber optic distribution box (FDB) is a passive enclosure used to terminate, splice, and distribute optical fibers. It organizes incoming feeder cables and outgoing drop cables, providing mechanical protection, maintaining optical performance, and simplifying long-term maintenance. FDBs are commonly used in FTTH (Fiber to the Home) and PON (Passive Optical Network) deployments, where reliability, density, and future scalability are critical. Key features include:

- Splice trays for fiber fusion splicing
- Adapters for SC/LC connectors
- Cable routing components to manage slack and bend radius
- Environmental protection with IP-rated enclosures for outdoor or industrial use

Types and Materials

Fiber optic distribution boxes come in various configurations, typically supporting 8 to 96 fiber ports or more. Materials vary depending on installation needs:

- ABS: Lightweight, cost-effective, suitable for indoor use
- ABS+PC: Better impact resistance, limited outdoor tolerance
- SMC: High UV and mechanical durability, ideal for outdoor or industrial scenarios
