AI Overview

Neproplast and OCC offer high-quality fiber optic corrugated pipes and NEMA 4X enclosures suitable for cold aisle and industrial environments. Fiber Optic Corrugated Pipes Neproplast manufactures corrugated optic ducts (COD) and inner duct pipes designed for fiber optic cable installations. These pipes feature: Flexible, crush-resistant construction for indoor, underground, or challenging installations. HDPE material with a siliconized inner layer to reduce friction and protect fiber cables during installation. Multi-color options for easy identification and project differentiation. Durability and impact resistance, ensuring long-term performance in mechanical and environmental stress conditions. Standard diameters from DN16 to DN50, with custom sizes available. These corrugated pipes are ideal for cold aisle deployments in data centers, as they allow efficient cable management while protecting fibers from mechanical stress and environmental exposure. NEMA 4X Enclosures For protecting fiber optic components in cold aisle or industrial environments, NEMA 4X-rated enclosures provide: Protection against dirt, dust, oil, water, and corrosive materials. Indoor and outdoor suitability, with high and low temperature tolerance. Construction from molded fiberglass-reinforced polyester or polycarbonate, offering chemical and UV resistance. Various sizes to accommodate 12 to 96 fiber ports or other equipment. IP66 compliance, ensuring protection against powerful water jets and harsh cleaning procedures. Manufacturers like OCC and Armagard provide enclosures that are compatible with fiber optic cabling systems, making them suitable for cold aisle containment in data centers or industrial telecom setups.
