

Iraqi relay protection manufacturers

AI Overview

Key companies in Iraq providing relay protection devices include Al-Mial Company, Hadeer Alwaha, and Rao Automotive Relays, among others. Al-Mial Company is a Siemens-authorized electrical contracting firm in Iraq specializing in high, medium, and low-voltage installations, testing, commissioning, SCADA systems, and protection relays. They provide Siemens SIPROTEC relay configuration and commissioning, and offer training for operational teams. Al-Mial is particularly active in oil, gas, and energy projects, and serves as the official Siemens distributor for protection relays and RTU products in southern Iraq. Hadeer Alwaha, based in Baghdad, supplies motor protection relays, ATS modules, and relay modules for control panels. They distribute products from major brands such as Siemens, Schneider Electric, ABB, and Eaton, catering to industrial, commercial, and solar energy projects. Their offerings include detailed specifications and documentation for project integration, making them a reliable supplier for electrical protection systems. Rao Automotive Relays operates as a manufacturer and supplier of relays in Iraq, providing a wide range of high-quality relays that meet international performance and safety standards. They serve OEMs, dealers, and industrial clients, offering solutions for high-voltage and high-power equipment control. Their relays are suitable for power distribution systems, HVAC units, and industrial automation.

Market Overview The Iraqi protective relay market is growing due to modernization of the electricity distribution network and integration of renewable energy sources. Companies in this sector focus on technologically advanced relay solutions to enhance grid reliability. Challenges include infrastructure limitations, regulatory uncertainty, and economic fluctuations, but government policies are supporting infrastructure development and reliability improvements.
