

Price of attenuator type optical attenuator

AI Overview

Optical attenuators typically cost between $5 and $50 for standard fixed types, with variable or high-precision models costing more.

Price Range

Fixed fiber optic attenuators: Standard single-mode or multimode fixed attenuators generally range from $5 to $20 for low to moderate attenuation levels (1–10 dB), depending on connector type and supplier. Higher attenuation values (up to 30 dB) may cost $20–$50.

Variable optical attenuators: These allow adjustable attenuation and are more expensive, often starting around $50 and can exceed $200 for high-precision or laboratory-grade models.

Bulk or custom orders: Suppliers like Teleweaver offer discounts for bulk purchases, potentially reducing the per-unit cost by 30% or more.

Factors Affecting Cost

Type of attenuator: Fixed attenuators are cheaper than variable or digital models.

Connector type: LC, SC, FC, and ST connectors may have slightly different prices, with APC variants generally costing more.

Attenuation level: Higher dB values or custom attenuation levels increase cost.

Precision and quality: Laboratory-grade or high-power laser attenuators are priced higher due to stricter tolerances and optical quality.

Supplier and shipping: Prices vary by distributor; some offer free shipping or warranties, which can affect overall cost.

Where to Buy

DigiKey: Offers a wide selection of fiber optic attenuators with real-time pricing and same-day shipping.

Arrow Electronics: Stocks fixed, variable, and digital attenuators from leading manufacturers.

Teleweaver and HeyOptics: Provide customizable attenuators with options for urgent delivery and bulk pricing.

In summary, for typical single-mode fiber applications, expect to pay $5–$50 for fixed attenuators and $50–$200+ for variable or high-precision models, with costs influenced by connector type, attenuation level, and supplier.
