

Recommended ladder-type cable trays

AI Overview

Ladder-type cable trays are ideal for supporting heavy-duty cables over long distances, offering excellent ventilation, accessibility, and modular installation options.

Overview of Ladder-Type Cable Trays Ladder-type cable trays consist of two long side rails connected by evenly spaced rungs, resembling a ladder. This open design allows efficient heat dissipation, easy cable fastening, and straightforward maintenance or future expansion, making them suitable for industrial, commercial, and data center applications. They are particularly effective for long horizontal runs and large power cables, commonly used in petrochemical plants, refineries, thermal power stations, and telecommunications rooms.

Material and Construction Ladder trays are typically made from galvanized steel, aluminum, or FRP (fiber-reinforced plastic). Steel provides high mechanical strength, aluminum offers corrosion resistance with a lighter weight, and FRP is suitable for highly corrosive environments. For example, Hubbell's NEXTFRAME® Ladder Tray uses 16-gauge tubular steel for a rugged yet lightweight structure, supporting long cable runs and providing smooth bends for cable routing.

Key Features and Benefits

- Ventilation: Open rungs allow air circulation, preventing overheating of power and control cables.
- Accessibility: Cables can be installed or removed from the top or bottom without dismantling the tray.
- Modularity: Ladder trays can be configured for new or existing cable routes, mounted on floors, walls, ceilings, or equipment racks.
- Load Capacity: Trays are rated by load class, which defines the maximum cable weight they can support over a given span.
- Compliance: Ladder trays should conform to IEC 61537 or BS EN 61537 standards for safe and reliable installation.

Recommended Applications

- Industrial Plants: For heavy power and instrumentation cables over long distances.
- Data Centers and Telecommunications Rooms: For structured cable management, grounding, and strain relief.
- Commercial Buildings: For overhead cable runs where accessibility and...
