

Where is the Santong cable tray factory located

AI Overview

Santong's factory is located in Feicheng, Shandong, China. Santong, a manufacturer specializing in ropes, nets, twines, and new plastic fiber materials, has its headquarters and main production facility in Feicheng, Shandong. Feicheng is a city in the Shandong province of eastern China, known for its industrial and manufacturing activities. While Santong is primarily recognized for its fiber and rope products, its operations include cable tray production, aligning with its broader industrial manufacturing capabilities.

Additional Context

Regional Significance: Shandong province is a major industrial hub in China, hosting numerous manufacturers of electrical and industrial equipment, which provides Santong with access to skilled labor, logistics, and supply chains.

Factory Capabilities: While specific details about the Santong cable tray production line are limited, the company's location in Feicheng allows it to serve both domestic and international markets efficiently.

Nearby Industrial Infrastructure: Feicheng's proximity to major transport routes and ports in Shandong facilitates the export of cable trays and other industrial products to global clients. For business inquiries or visits, contacting Santong directly through their corporate channels is recommended to confirm factory access and production specifics.
